ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An element management system (EMS) for managing elements of a communication network utilizes memory and a system controller. The memory stores template data that is indicative of control values for controlling a network element. The 5   system controller is configured to identify a plurality of network elements within the communication network based on user input and to automatically provision each of the identified network elements based on the template data.

10